The job demands-resources (JD-R) model was used to examine the relationship between job characteristics, burnout, and (other ratings of) performance (N = 146). We hypothesized that job demands (e.g., work pressure and emotional demands) would be the most important antecedents of the exhaustion component of burnout, which, in turn, would predict in-role performance (hypothesis 1).

As Figure 1 depicts, the important variables of this research include brand equity as the independent variable, consumer satisfaction as the mediating variable, and brand loyalty as the dependent variable. Keller (1993, p. 7) refers to brand equity as "the differential effect of brand knowledge on customers' response to the marketing of a brand".
