Process 50 Product Designs From Concept to Manufacture

Process: 50 Product Designs from Concept to Manufacture by Jennifer Hudson (published by Laurence King) is the same experience, but for products. Well, almost. Process explores the inspiration behind each designer and product before leading into an explanation of the production processes. These are accompanied by images of the various stages of design, from back-of-the-metro-ticket sketches to computer renderings, prototypes and final pieces.

Chosen from around the world, they span furniture, lighting, tableware, and textiles. The work of both long-established and emerging designers is featured, with each product selected for its significant use of new technology, unorthodox, or complex production process, use of innovative materials and, in some cases, for the creative concept behind it.

Process: 50 Product Designs from Concept to Manufacture

In this chapter we will learn about product design, which is the process of deciding on the unique characteristics and features of the company's product. We will also learn about process selection, which is the development of the process necessary to produce the designed product. Product design and process selection decisions are typically made together.

Embodiment Design . It is a process where the structured development of the design concepts takes place. It is in this phase that decisions are made on strength, material selection, size shape and spatial compatibility.
Embodiment design is concerned with three major tasks – product architecture, configuration design, and parametric design. (1)
